I wanted to be able to dye some things more naturally, without always buying dyes in boxes. This book surpassed all expectations! It's an absolute delight. I hadn't realized before I purchased it that it's not just about dyeing from kitchen produce, it also has lovely projects to make and is organized to progressively learn about dyeing techniques and mordanting. The aesthetics of the book are first class. The dyes are gentle colors, not rich and deep like commercial dyes, but quite lovely. So for example in project one you make a sachet with old fabric scraps you tea dye, but later you might make mini raffia baskets dyed with onion skins, granny square pin cushions dyed with hibiscus, a silk stole dyed with black grapes to make a lovely lavender color, or a felt accessory case dyed with black beans. Most of the projects repurpose fabric from clothes, trimmed from sewing projects, or ugly orphans of our craft supplies, so it's also quite economical. The how to stitch, knit, and crochet the projects are organized in the back. I want to make just about every project in the book. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Accessible introduction to natural dyeing. By L. Smith This is a good book that shows how many dyes can be made from ordinary kitchen foods. I like that the author tells how to dye without using toxins. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By leanna
